By WILLIAM PEET.

Through nine rounds of baseball in a July rain, floundering over a soggy diamond, Acting Manager Wild Bill Donovan piloted his Tiger crew, winning the second game of the series yesterday by 8 to 3.

Wild Bill is some pilot, believe us. The score shows thirteen hits for the home flock against nine for Detroit, and those who stayed at home probably wonder why thirteen safe smashes only yielded three runs. The answer is simply, Wild Bill. Our athletes had no trouble connecting safely with the ball, but in only two innings were hits in evidence with the sacks piled up.

Manager McAleer propelled two of his youngsters into the line-light. Joe Ainsmith, late of Lawrence, Mass., catcher, and Bill Otey, one time Virginia League twirler star.

Ainsmith quickly wiggled himself into the affections of the District fans. After two had perished in the opening round, Cobb drew a base on balls and tried to steal, a perfect throw by Ainsmith to McBride nipped the Georgia peach two feet from the bag. Then in Washington's second inning with Conroy on first, Ainsmith brought him home with a clean single past second.

Otey Goes Into Pitch.

Bill Otey went into the box when the ninth for Detroit opened, as McAleer substituted Schaefer for Groom when it came Bob's turn to bat in the eighth. Otey was reached for a run, but looked pretty good at that. He is not in the best of health right now, and will doubtless improve.

Twice the umpires had to call time on account of the showers. The playing field was in wretched shape, and a ball going to the outfield for a safe hit usually stuck where it landed. How the infielders ever handled the slimy pill was a mystery. Very few wild heaves were in evidence.

Bob Groom had one of his off days, giving seven bases on balls, six of which figured in Detroit's run hunt. Local errors also helped the cause of the opposition.

The Nationals drew first blood when Conroy opened the second with a hit to left, stealing second. McBride popped to Jones, and Gessler drove a savage liner over Delehanty's head. Conroy, fearing to take a chance on Sam Crawford's arm, pulled up at third. Unguarded to Cobb; then Ainsmith came through with a single, scoring Conroy. Doc Gessler tried to reach the plate on the clout, but a perfect throw by Cobb snuffed him out.

Tigers Score Twice.

Groom held the Tigers hitless until the fourth. McIntyre started the trouble by drawing a base on balls. Delehanty singled, Cobb walked. Crawford popped to Ainsmith, and Mortariy dropped the ball to an unguarded spot in left scoring McIntyre. Cobb reaching second on the play, and Delehanty going to third, Bush grounded to McBride, who threw out Del at the plate. With T. Jones at the bat and Cobb on third, the latter started to steal home. Groom was winding up and evidently became flustered for he slammed the ball hurriedly. Ainsmith leaped into the air, but could only touch the ball with the tips of his fingers and Cobb was easily safe. Score, Detroit 2, Washington 1.

The Nationals tied the score in the fourth when Elberfeld led off with a two-bagger to left and reached third on Conroy's sacrifice. McBride drew four balls, and then came the double steal. Fine sprinting and a great slide earned the verdict of "safe" when Elberfeld came home.

The sixth was a dismal affair and saw the Jennings tribe pack the game away in their kilts. Three runs showed up on two passes, four singles, and a couple of stolen bases. Groom continued his careless way of handing out bases on balls during Detroit's seventh. Passes to Cobb and Bush, a wild west heave by Groom, and a fumble and poor throw by McBride, together with a well-placed hit from Mortariy's war club tacked on two more runs to the Tiger total.

Cobb Gets a Hit.

Otey mounted the hill when the ninth opened, and after disposing of Delehanty was rapped for a single by Ty Cobb, when that worthy had two strikes and three balls called. Cobb stole second and Crawford hoisted to Gessler, Morially was again the handy man with the wagon tongue, a well-placed single to left scored Cobb.

The Nationals' third run came in the ninth, after two had gone. Milan led off by jamming the ball through Tom Jones' props. Killifer and Elberfeld died, but Conroy beat out a bunt and McBride singled to left scoring Milan.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

In the third Milan let three go by him, which were balls, and then placidly placed the next one down near the right field foul line.

Bob Unguard confided this news—his rheumatism was practically cured by the mud baths of yesterday.

There was an argument among the scintillating scribes in the press box as to whether the game should be called a game of baseball or dubbed water polo.

In the third session Kid Elberfeld and Ainsmith touched noses in going for Crawford's foul fly. Ainsmith got it, and the "KID" with Chesterfieldian decorum, doffed his cap to our new backstop.

The wild pitch by Bob Groom in the fourth was due to the wet ball he had to handle. Tyrus Cobb, however, took advantage of the slip and scored.

A woman in the grand stand made an accurate estimate of the number of balls used in the game, figuring between twelve and fifteen. Joe Quirk afterward stated that fourteen balls were in play.

That Kid Elberfeld person got a mud bath in the third inning, when he slid to the third sack. Following this up, Elberfeld oozed his way to the home plate on a throw to second.

ACCIDENT MARS GAME.

Melton Knocked Unconscious by a Pitched Ball in Eighth.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—New York had no trouble in winning the last game of the series from the White Sox. By getting five runs in the sixth inning the Yanks got a safe lead, having accumulated two previous to that. Paul Melton was knocked unconscious in the eighth inning by being hit on the head with a pitched ball. Score: New York ABH OAE Chicago ABH OAE Daniels, cf. 4 2 1 0 0 0 0 0-7

SMITH TWIRLS GOOD BALL.

Keeps Hits Scattered, and Boston Wins, 2 to 0.

St. Louis, Aug. 16.—The St. Louis Americans lost to Boston today, 2 to 0. Smith kept the hits well scattered up to the eighth, and then he was taken out after two singles had been made to allow Hall to finish out the game. Linke was hit hard in his first game here and was lucky to get away with a small score. Gardner was badly hurt in sliding to third in the seventh and had to be carried off the field. ## ATHLETICS REACH HIGH-WATER MARK

Mack Men Give Falkenberg Drubbing of His Career.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 16.—Hammering Falkenberg for twenty-three hits, sixteen of them in the eighth and ninth innings, the Athletics won from Cleveland today. Cleveland led to the fifth inning, when the Athletics scored twice and forged to the front, never to be headed. The eighth and ninth innings were simply massacres.

NATIONALS PAY $3,500 FOR MINOR LEAGUE FIELDER

Ralston, of Akron Club, Said to Be a Second Ty Cobb. Other Gossip of Interest to the Fans.

Before the present season draws to a close the Nationals will probably have two new outfielders in the game—Warren Miller, who was given a trial last season, and Ralston, the Akron player, purchased by the local management yesterday.

Miller was farmed to the Scranton club of the New York State League and has been playing great ball all season. He has taken on considerable weight and Scout Mike Kahoe, who has seen him in action several times, says he has improved 25 per cent.

It was learned on good authority that the Washington club paid $3,500 to the Akron management for Ralston—a pretty sweet sum for a minor leaguer. Padden and others send on glowing reports of that young man's prowess. In fact, a Washington fan who has seen Ralston play told the writer last night that he believed Ralston would turn out to be a second Ty Cobb. Good news, if true.

A special dispatch from The Washington Herald's representative in Akron follows: "Doc" Ralston, who has been playing in the outfield for the Akron team of the Ohio and Pennsylvania League, is considered by far the best outfielder in the O. and P. League. He is a fast man on the bases and covers an immense amount of ground in the field. As a hitter he is the equal of many in the big show to-day, and far superior to a lot of them.

Ralston joined the Akron team about the middle of the present season, coming to them in exchange for another fielder from East Liverpool. The affairs of the East Liverpool team were in a very much mixed condition and Ralston refused to longer play with them.

It was his intention to devote his time to the practice of dentistry, of which profession he is a graduate. Akron, however, made an offer for his service, and an exchange was effected.

When he reached Akron he was so well pleased with the team and the management that he determined to stay through out the season. Last year he did not play in organized ball, but devoted his time to helping his father in the profession of which he graduated. Previous to this time he played semi-professional ball, and only broke into organized ranks this season.

Ralston is a heavy hitter, has a home-run record, and has always been depended on in every game for a hit. He occupies the clean-up position in the batting order, and it has never been found necessary to move him from this position.

His position at the plate and the way he swings on the ball is entirely different from anything ever seen in this league. Washington is getting a good man and one who can go into the game and stay there. He will report in Washington in about three weeks.

Tommy Leahy, one of the catchers on the Washington club six or seven years ago, lies in a New Haven, Conn., hospital in a precarious condition. Despondent, and out of a job, he attempted last night to commit suicide by cutting his throat, and chances for recovery are said to be slim.

Leahy played with the St. Louis Nationals at one time, and his last regular engagement was with Kansas City. During the early part of the present season he was an umpire in the Connecticut League, but threw up his job on account of the usual unpleasant conditions in minor league games.

Leahy, in his prime, was rated as a mighty good catcher, but when he started to go back his fall was rapid. His cheerful manner and earnestness to do his best in every game made him many friends.

It leaked out last night that Clyde Milan, the Nationals' clever outfielder, was more seriously injured by his collision with Doc Gessler about a month ago than anybody realized. It was given out that his left shoulder was badly bruised and the ligaments torn, but when the fielder was examined and the X-ray put on his shoulder it was discovered that one of the small bones had been fractured.

Milan was sent to his home in Tennessee until the injury was entirely healed and told not to report until the Nationals returned from their Western trip last Monday.

Milan spent less than two weeks at home. He wanted to be back in the game, and telegraphed one of the officials of the Washington club that he felt pretty good and asked permission to join the team. No answer to this telegram was sent for the reason that the official happened to be out of town, and when he returned he learned that Milan had wired McAleer that he was coming and had topped a train for Cleveland.

Milan's shoulder is still far from strong, and he is taking chances every game he plays. Milan is as game as a pebble; he goes into every contest heart and soul. Few ball players would refuse a short vacation in the middle of the season as Milan did.

The third and final game of the present Detroit series will be played to-day, starting promptly at 3 o'clock, so as to enable the Detroit team to catch an early train for Boston.

"They can talk about the spitball fooling batters, they can prate about the curves that get us, but take it from me that the hardest ball to hit is the one you don't see. I mean the ones that are full of smoke."

That's the manner in which Eddie Collins, by a process of elimination, tells you his choice for the best pitcher in the American League. Naturally that selection is Walter Johnson, the smokeballer of the Washington team.

"I pick Johnson as the best pitcher," said Eddie, "for just that reason. He fires them at you so fast that some of them you don't see. You can watch a splitter, you can trace a curve, but you cannot do a thing with speed, when the ball moves so swiftly that you don't get a look at it."

"Yes, sir, Johnson for mine. Bender, too, for the same reason."
